

Glenn Davis is deputy director of the Council of Institutional Investors (CII). He has more than 20 years of experience in corporate governance, proxy voting and investor protection. His current duties touch CII's strategy, content management, audit matters, policy development and education. For eight years prior to becoming deputy director, Glenn was CII's director of research. His career began at the Investor Responsibility Research Center and continued at Institutional Shareholder Services before he joined CII as an analyst in 2010.

Glenn is a member of the FTSE Russell Policy Advisory Board and serves on the NASDAQ Listings Qualifications Hearing Panel. He is a non-voting observer on the Broadridge Independent Steering Committee. Glenn represents CII on the Investor Coalition for Equal Votes, an engagement initiative focused on strengthening companies' long-term alignment between ownership and control. He previously served as co-chair of the Universal Proxy Working Group. Glenn holds an MBA from George Washington University and an undergraduate degree from Dickinson College.
